Assessor has a 'dial-a-cut' line, Valley man says

CLARENCE E. Dickinson of Carmel Valley said he got his property tax assessment lowered $5,000 this week. And he said a neighbor got hers reduced $1,500 right over the telephone.

Dickinson, a retired Navy rear admiral, and several of his neighbors in the Robles del Rio area suspected their property assessments were incorrect. As he explained it:

"In July, I got a pre-Jarvis-Gann assessment notice. Then in early September, I got a form letter saying our post-Jarvis-Gann assessment was the same amount. So I went down Monday and showed them where I lived. They kind of laughed and pointed to one fellow and said, 'he takes care of that mess in the Upper Carmel Valley.' He told me there was some computer goof-up and, anyway, they reduced my assessment $5,000, or $50 in taxes."

The Jarvis-Gann property tax amendment, passed in June in California, rolled back assessments to the 1975 level and imposed a 1 per cent tax on the market value.

Post-Jarvis assessments were close to those before the initiative passed because the assessor had undervalued market prices in the mid-70s, said Bruce Reeves, the supervising appraiser in the Monterey County Assessor's Office.

"Portions of Carmel Valley had been reappraised in 1974, but the bulk of it had not. By coincidence, the full value in 1975 was quite close to what it actually was in 1977," said Reeves.

Reeves denied that there were any computer mistakes in the assessment notices mailed in September.

"I don't know if they were lying or not," Dickinson said, "but they said the computer had gone wrong."

He said the most important thing is that taxpayers understand they must question the new assessments by Monday, the

Rift develops over new growth policy

MONTEREY COUNTY has its first growth management policy, but a procedural delay at the board of supervisors Tuesday almost put it in limbo until November.

The supervisors adopted a general philosophy favoring managed growth on a 3-1 vote after 2½ hours of discussion. Supervisors Sam Farr, Michal Moore and Dusan Petrovic favored the policy. Supervisor Edwin Norris was opposed. Kenneth Blohm was absent, hospitalized for surgery this week.

The policy now goes back to the planning commission which will recommend what the county should do to put it into practice.

The commission could report back to the supervisors in November with its comments and suggestions.

The policy will be put into the county general plan and a point system will be adopted to evaluate developments before they enter the planning process. The system is designed to determine if projects meet minimum criteria of acceptability. The criteria will be established later.

Farr said it will cost several hundred thousand dollars to start the program.

The policy itself directs growth to existing urban service areas or to undeveloped land where urban services have been provided.

It opposes development on agricultural land and bans polluting industries from the county.

The key element is the point system, according to Moore. It will outline what standards a project must meet for the county to consider it and should, he said, simplify the planning process for builders.

The board almost didn't get as far as adopting the policy itself. Norris, one of two supervisors on the four-man committee which drafted it, sought to have the two-page document returned to the planning commission for comment before the board acted. This would have meant another two-month delay in a policy first suggested three and a half years ago.

Farr, an advocate of controlled growth, criticized the Salinas supervisor, saying the delay tactic was "another example of the Ali Shuffle to not get a commitment" for the policy.

"To send it back for another hearing on a two-page generality . . . I just think it's a lack of the county committing itself to do anything further for growth management," Farr said angrily.

He wanted the policy adopted and immediately referred to the commission.

That is what the board later agreed to do. But it took two votes and a change in semantics to make it happen.

Moore and Farr supported a motion to adopt the policy and send it to the commission. Norris and Petrovic were opposed, saying it would bypass the commission as an advisory body.

After some discussion, Moore moved to adopt the policy and send it to the commission for comments or possible changes.

Petrovic, feeling that the commission now would not be slighted, switched his vote.

NORRIS STILL maintained that the policy should go back to the commission for comments and then come to the supervisors for another hearing.

An exasperated Farr pointed out that growth management already had been through "seven planning commission hearings and five hearings before this board" over a three-year period.

Norris said that by adopting the policy now, the board would "set it in concrete" and start applying it in planning decisions

He's restored 600 of them

Gaily painted horses caught his eye

PETERSON CONWAY first fell in love with carousel horses in 1964 during a trip to Europe the summer after he graduated from Carmel High School.

He bought the first one at a flea market in Paris. It was half-devoured by termites and, he recalls, "It nearly fell apart on the way home."

Since then, Conway has bought and restored more than 600 of the 19th-century carousel creatures. He still owns about 180, some of which he keeps for himself. Others are on sale at Conway of Asia, his store in Carmel Valley, or at other Peninsula shops.

Some Conway horses have even been on display at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., and other museums with exhibits of these functional works of art.

Carousel horses flourished from the 1830s to the 1920s, gracing merry-go-rounds throughout Europe. They were hand-carved of durable madura wood from southern Italy.

"Some of them were made of as many as 100 separate pieces of wood," Conway said.

BRIGHTLY PAINTED, they pranced up and down on the carousels for decades. Eventually, the old carnival rides deteriorated and were torn down. The horses survived and filtered into antique stores and flea markets and, thence, to Conway.

He not only sells the animals, he restores them as well. Conway recarves damaged pieces to make a horse whole and repaints some of them in their original bright colors.

> He bought the first one at a flea market

Some customers prefer the horses unfinished, the natural wood bare of all but the slightest traces of the original paint.

While most of Conway's carousel animals are horses, he has some other exotic species as well: leopards, ostriches, camels, even pigs which carried generations of children around to the tintinnabulous sounds of merry-go-round music.

He also has some of the chariots and coaches used by parents who chose to forego the more active ride carousel animal offered.

INFLATION HAS struck the carousel horse market over the last 14 years. Conway recalls that horses which he bought for $50 to $100 now command a minimum of $800 and $1,500 or more for particularly fine specimens.

They have become popular as an ex-

Cracked crab, champagne reward

Valley firemen win first place

Cracked crab and champagne awaited the Carmel Valley Volunteer Fire Department entry and first-place winning team among the Monterey Peninsula fire department inter-race rivalry at Sunday's Don Lucas Ford Hospice Run. T-shirts emblazoned with "Fagawi," the battle cry of an Indian tribe adopted long ago as the department's slogan, combined with superior stamina for the victory. Making up the team were Jim Bowe, Kalani Fonseca, Tom Augustitus, Bill Conlan, Jeff Frye, Fran Hughes and Dave Chaney.

Mid-Valley department fire chief Ron Zeise entered his team in the race benefiting the Hospice House in Carmel Valley. The Mid-Valley fire laddies then issued a challenge accepted by departments in Carmel, Carmel Highlands, Carmel Valley, Monterey, Pacific Grove and Division of Forestry fire stations.

Although they finished seventh among the departments overall, Mid-Valley fireman John Pomeroy finished 219th, the first fireman to finish; and Marge Kohler took a fourth place among women over 40. Other members of the Zeise team were Jim McCabe and Steve Stanley.

Fidelity Club season begins with pot luck

The Fidelity Club fall season will begin next Thursday, with a potluck dinner at 6 p.m.

Florence and Carl Naslund and Vera and Bert Heckenlaible, host couples for the affair, issue an open invitation to the public to bring a potluck dish, their own table service and spend a social evening in the Fellowship Hall of the Carmel Valley Community Chapel on Village Drive.

Panetta-Seastrand debates at RLS, Rancho Canada

Two of the 15 public debates scheduled between Rep. Leon E. Panetta, D-Monterey, and his Republican opponent, Eric Seastrand, will be conducted in the Carmel area.

The first local debate is scheduled for Friday, Oct. 13 at Robert Louis Stevenson School in Pebble Beach. It will begin at 10:30 a.m. in Douglas Hall.

Later, on Thursday, Oct. 19, the candidates are scheduled to debate at Rancho Canada Golf Club on Carmel Valley Road. The debate is to start at 8:30 p.m.

The student radio station KRLS will host the Stevenson School debate. The one at Rancho Canada is being sponsored by the Retired Officers Association.

Legion invites new members to meetings

Prospective new members are welcome to attend a special get acquainted meeting to be hosted Monday by American Legion Post 512 in Carmel.

The meeting gets underway at 7 p.m. in the Legion post hall at Eighth and Dolores. Refreshments and free beer will be served.

There is no minimum age requirement, but Legion members must have served in a branch of the armed forces.

Valley young people part of Catholic Youth Week

Valley young people from Our Lady of Mount Carmel Catholic Church participated in last week's four-day Monterey Peninsula Catholic Youth Week. "Youth Yes" was the theme of the project designed to bring young people and youth leaders together.

There was an outdoor Mass and games at San Carlos Cathedral; "Build a sundae ice cream social" at the Carmel Mission; an inter-generation night for youths and their parents with a communication skills discussion led by Gary Morais at St. Frances Xavier Church in Seaside; and a potluck "anything goes" dinner attended by 150 at St. Angela's with liturgy celebrated at the end of the evening.

The activities ended on Saturday with youths from the local parishes going to the Great America Theme Park in Santa Clara for the annual Catholic Youth Day.

Our Lady of Mount Carmel youth activities will begin the fall season Monday in the parish hall from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Any Valley young person from ninth through twelfth grades is invited to come, according to co-directors Jim Kohnke and Art Pasquinelli.

Talk about freeway, traffic

Leaders hike Scenic Road and Hatton Canyon

CITY, COUNTY AND state officials toured the site of the proposed Hatton Canyon freeway and Scenic Road on Carmel Point on Friday trying to come up with ideas to solve the traffic problems in the two areas.

The tour was organized by Supervisor Sam Farr of Carmel who said he wanted to "get the experts together" at one time to look at the areas.

He didn't foresee any immediate results from the four-hour walk at the two sites.

Two points did emerge from discussions along the way: it will be at least eight years before any road could be built in Hatton Canyon, assuming everyone agrees something should be built; and a one-way road is probably the best solution to the congestion problem along Scenic Road.

Hatton Canyon is by far the thornier of the two issues since there is no agreement on the type of road if any to be built there.

MOE ORETT of the Monterey County Public Works department, explains some of the problems involved in building a road up Hatton Canyon to take some of the load off Highway 1.

The state still has an elevated freeway in its plans while many local residents and the city of Carmel want a much smaller project, perhaps a winding two-lane road.

THE PROBLEM WITH the area, dramatically pointed up on the tour, is the steep rise in elevation the narrow canyon takes at its northern end.

This slope to the top of Carmel Hill left Caltrans, the state highway department, looking at either large-scale earthmoving operations or a roadbed elevated on pylons above the canyon floor.

Caltrans engineer Harry Case, who joined the walk up the canyon, still holds to that position. He said this design is needed, among other reasons, to create a road that will meet state safety standards.

The road also must slope gradually, Case said, so cars and trucks can make it up the hill.

But Carmel area residents along for the tour believe the narrow, winding road endorsed by the Carmel City Council would be possible if the state set out to design it.

They also suggested that the road not be built to the standard needed for truck traffic. This would permit a steeper grade on the road and less radical alteration of the landscape.

ONE INDIVIDUAL on the tour remarked that "you would have to give everyone a course in engineering" before the public understands how much work would be needed to build a road through the canyon.

According to Moe Orett, a traffic engineer with the Monterey County Public Works Department, it would be hard to make the road winding because the canyon is narrow and straight.

Asked how long it would take to get construction going in Hatton Canyon, Case said a minimum of eight years.

The freeway was designed and in state construction plans when local opposition blocked the project in the 1960s.

Case did not know when an interim traffic solution, such as another climbing lane up Carmel Hill on Highway 1, could be built. Along Scenic Road on Carmel Point there was more agreement. Traffic is a problem and could be controlled with a well-designed one-way road, the group concluded.

The one-way road solution was proposed in a University of California study of the area conducted for Monterey County. The students doing the study suggested several different configurations: one-way north, one-way south or two one-way directions ending in a turn-around in the middle.

ONE RESIDENT said she feared a one-way road would encourage drag racers because there would be no on-coming cars. But Orett said this potential problem could be eliminated by installing planters that would put some extra curves in the road, eliminating the straightaways attractive to speeders.

(Michael Stang photos)

He said the road also could be narrowed to allow for a pedestrian walkway. The narrower road would discourage racing, Orett said.

State parks officials on the tour commented that pedestrian access to the rocky coast would have to be controlled because of erosion on the cliffs at Carmel Point.

Carmel City Administrator Jack Collins said the city has had little luck encouraging people to use marked paths to the beach along its portion of Scenic Road.

Orett pointed out some of the attractive—and effective—wooden barriers along the road which keep people from trudging through the ice plant but don't obstruct views from the road.

The group also discussed having no-parking tow-away zones along the Point to discourage illegal parking. Many people are willing to pay a $5 traffic fine, Collins said, as part of the price of enjoying Carmel. The state, meanwhile, has had no trouble with illegal parking in its lot on Carmel River Beach since it posted the area as a tow-away zone after 6 p.m.

The tour group included Monterey County Planning Director Ed DeMars, Carmel Planning Director Robert Griggs, Jim Iverson of the California Highway Patrol, planning staff members and citizens.

Rift develops over new growth policy

without consulting the commission.

Norris has, however, regularly voted to overturn planning commission decisions when they come to the supervisors on appeal.

Farr said the key to the policy is how it is applied.

"You can't control growth with motherhood," he said, referring to the general nature of the policy. "We have the power to manage growth. The question is the political commitment of this board to do it."

He said the counties of Santa Clara, San Diego, Tulare and San Luis Obispo already are investing time and money—up to $750,000—in growth management plans.

Monterey County must do the same, he said.

"The board position is as trustees for the future," Farr said. "As the father of a new Monterey County resident, I sometimes think what will I be able to tell her about Monterey County. Will I be able to point to the rivers, mountains and quality of life that attracted us here? Or will I explain what those amenities were before they were covered by rampant development?"

MOORE SAID THE point system will end the present "hit or miss" planning process. Developers would know in advance what criteria they must meet and would design their projects accordingly, he said.

In the long run, Moore said on a pessimistic note, economics is working against the rural open space that make the county attractive.

"If you want open space, if you want to preserve Carmel Valley, it will cost you a lotta bucks," Moore said.

The same economic pressures mean that "the opportunity for rural living can't go on." Demand for rural housing is rising and Moore said population pressures will only grow worse in the future.

"We can't go back to what it was," he said.

The growth management policy, if it is tied to the availability of roads, water, sewage treatment and drainage, can at best direct growth and control its phasing, Moore said.

The growth management policy won unqualified support at the hearing from the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, the Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club, the League of Women Voters of the Monterey Peninsula and Salinas and the Audubon Society.

BARBARA SHIPNUCK, who opposes Norris in the November election, said the policy needs to speak more clearly about providing low- and middle-income housing, a point also raised by Kay Bickel of Salinas.

Hellmut Meyer of the Monterey County Foundation of Concern said his group favors "reasonable growth." He questioned specifics in the policy which might force up land values in development areas and which could impose an "arbitrary" point system on developers.

Attorney Brian Finegan, who has represented land developers in the county, endorsed the policy but made some suggestions on specific wording to eliminate any ambiguities.

by Lucy Smithson

It is that time of year again . . . the time of year when there are lots of flies. There are regular house flies, little clinging deer flies and even a few monstrous fuzzy flies called—after their size—horse flies.

Horse flies don't come from horses. Nor do they particularly go for them. They bite people too—ouch! Frankly we've always felt horses were too small to have a fly that large named for them. Any fly that large should be called an elephant fly.

The primary hatching ground of most of these flies is the drying algae of the riverbeds. Anyone who has seen drying seaweed on the beach and beach apartments giving birth to hordes of flies knows this. River algae is equally productive.

To take advantage of this annual food source, God arranges for millions of baby toads to be hopping about the neighborhood. At Garland Park, a "Toad Crossing" sign has been erected to warn visitors of this seasonal phenomenon.

Also nicely timed for the end of summer are young birds leaving their nests and growing strong on a diet of amphibians. God grows flies to feed toads; he grows toads to feed birds. He grows birds to feed the eye and delight the mind of man.

Some undelighted humans, particularly those who were behind the door when God was passing out brains, try to blame their horse-owning neighbors for the seasonal increase in flies. Happens every year this time.

The correct response to this is "Pphhhttttt!" Let's try that again—nice and juicy now: "Pphhhttttt!"

Horseowners, if you weren't causing flies in April, you're not causing flies now. Maybe your neighbor doesn't really understand living in the country.

Speaking of country life, there's an ongoing project in Carmel Valley Village that seeks to demonstrate the values of a rural setting for young people.

It's called Ford House and is located on a sunny acre at the corner of Pilot Road and Via Contenta. Ford House is an occupational and skill center for teenagers who for various reasons need to live in a home away from home. Currently two boys and three girls live there under the direction of Hadijah Sanders, a motherly horsewoman and all around good sport and Kevin Tate, a counselor.

The children work and live under a strict accountability program where points are tallied daily and the achievement of goals is rewarded. Director Hadijah has helped them to plant and harvest a garden and helps them to care for the house pets. She would like to try a horse or two in the large fenced paddocks behind the house.

Before Ford House became a group home, the family living there had horses, goats, chickens and geese. The white wooden fences and adobe barn are still there along with a cross-fenced paddock of nearly half an acre.

Hadijah Sanders understands that horses and young people form emotional attachments that mere adults can't duplicate. She sees the value of a horse program not as recreation or an additional skill but as teaching the youngsters self-esteem and improving their own self-respect. And all of us who have ever been 14 years old and a horse lover agree with her wholeheartedly.

But when she put word out that she would accept a donated horse or two, she was offered the lame, halt and blind. Not the sort of horses a child can safely become committed to. The soundest was a 23-year-old Thoroughbred mare over 16 hands tall, who was ridable only by very experienced riders, difficult to shoe and had to be brought by hired trailer from Sacramento.

What Hadijah had in mind was something younger, calmer and preferably about 13 or 14 hands. The small size is preferred because horses love to step on the toes of urban children. "Life itself has stepped on some of these kids," murmurs Hadijah. "I want to give them a leg up."

The idea of having two is so the horses can have each other for buddies and the buddy system can be used for the children also. If you have one or two large ponies or small horses suitable to become much loved pets, phone Ford House at 659-4308. The donation is tax deductible as are donations of tack, equipment and feed.

Confident despite warning

Valley real estate market can withstand tight money, high interest, brokers say

By JIM BARRETT

THE REAL ESTATE market is not on the verge of a collapse, brokers from Carmel and Carmel Valley said Friday. They vigorously disputed a claim along that line made last week by a federal home loan official.

Robert H. McKinney, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, warned the Federal Reserve Board that it was risking a collapse by continuing to tighten credit to banks. The move is designed to reduce inflation and bolster the dollar overseas.

Brokers who were contacted stressed that activity in the local real estate market has not been affected by the tight money market. They acknowledged that mortgage money is at a premium, but that the situation was not serious. If it was, they said, houses would not be selling.

"If money gets tight, as opposed to expensive, we'll all know about it," said Arthur Strasburger Jr. of Carmel Realty Co. in Carmel.

"In 1966, when the money market was the tightest I can remember, you couldn't get loans much beyond 60 per cent (of the sale price). Our volume then was 20 per cent off what it had been in the years immediately preceding," he said.

What makes a mortgage "expensive" is the interest rate. If the rate is increased one-quarter of 1 per cent, for example, the payment on a $50,000 conventional mortgage goes up $9 a month.

LAST WEEK, one of the largest home-loan lenders raised its rate from 9.75 per cent to 10 per cent.

"I did it to reduce demand. We don't have the volume to lend," said William W. Clarke, chief loan officer for Monterey Savings and Loan Association in Monterey.

Savings associations like to "sell the paper" on loans to federal mortgage agencies. The associations guarantee a yield and earn whatever is left over. What is important to lenders is that by selling paper, they do not tie up substantial amounts of their own money. But the margin for profit on selling paper has contracted. Probably the best known mortgage agency is the Federal National Mortgage Association, referred to as "Fannie Mae" in the industry.

"They want an annual yield of about 9.7 per cent and our interest rate was at 9.75 per cent. That's why I upped it to 10 per cent last Wednesday," said Clarke.

If they can sell paper at a profit, cash at the savings associations goes farther and more loans are given. Clarke said his association budgets $15 million a month for loans in Monterey, San Benito and Santa Cruz counties. The average loan is for $50,000, he said.

Budgets are exhausted more quickly, however, because the price of houses continues to rise, said Clarke. In addition, deposits are not increasing rapidly enough. Many savers are buying high-interest Treasury notes instead of putting their money in passbook accounts. To compound the problem, associations are required to keep 6.5 per cent of their deposits on reserve.

Clarke said he agreed with McKinney and predicted a mild recession in the housing market. Asked if it would include Carmel and Carmel Valley, he replied, "Yes, of course. But that may fall right into their laps because that's what they want—no more people."

A CHECK OF the multiple listings at the Carmel Board of Realtors showed no significant slowdown in real estate sales, however. Listings cover Carmel, Carmel Valley and the southern portion of Del Monte Forest.

Jitters always hit the real estate industry when loan money gets tight, said Don Middleton, a broker at Porter-Marquard Realty in Carmel Valley. He said the typical buyer in Carmel or the Valley has a substantial amount of money from the previous sale of a home. Therefore, said Middleton, tight money has little effect on him. Nancy Strathmeyer, another broker from Carmel Valley, said almost half of her clients who buy do so without the conventional mortgage from a bank or savings association.

IF TIGHT MONEY has any local effect, Mrs. Strathmeyer said, it will be on those who build on speculation.

"What it will do is make builders reluctant to build because they will be worried about whether the houses will sell. But I think that's more of the problem in areas outside California. The housing market in California is very strong. The demand is there," she said.

Of interest in the wake of McKinney's prediction is the recent state Supreme Court ruling that struck down alienation clauses in mortgage agreements. An alienation clause requires the homeowner to pay off the mortgage when he sells his house.

All of the local real estate brokers who were contacted said more loans will be assumed by new buyers because of the ruling. They regarded that prospect as an additional reason for predicting the local market will remain strong.

If money for mortgages gets tighter, more sellers simply will carry part of the financing themselves, according to Ben Heinrich, an associate with Enos Fouratt Real Estate in Carmel.

"In Carmel," he said, "there are so many people who have so much equity in their homes that they would be capable of handling the financing themselves."

Heinrich said houses would be sold with the understanding the buyer would repay the seller's loan in one or two years when the money market improves.

Contract proposal rejected

A contract proposal from non-teaching employees in Carmel Unified School District was rejected by the board of trustees Tuesday. The board instructed its representatives to meet with the employees' union to negotiate a contract for the 1978-79 school year.

The board proposed that the present contract be continued with minor changes in wording.

The California School Employees Association chapter in the Carmel district had asked for a 10 per cent wage increase, enhanced vacation benefits and for an involuntary deduction of union dues from the paychecks of non-union employees.

One opinion

Annexation would dismantle local firefighting team

By STEP TYNER

THIS ARTICLE IS of vital importance to every resident of County Service Area (CSA) 43, but for the benefit of newcomers to the area, a brief history:

In 1965, the board of supervisors advised the people of this area that they could no longer use general tax funds to pay for fire protection for rural areas. CSA 43 was formed by the supervisors at our request. At the same time, CSA 42 was formed by the Del Monte Forest people. The insurance classification rate at that time was 10.

Over the years, we installed fire hydrants; obtained one class-A fire engine in partnership with CSA 42 which is stationed on Carmel Hill; obtained a $100,000 site from Carmel Rancho Inc. without cost; built a fire station and now have two class-A trucks at our Rio Road station. You are assured of a fast response by three fire trucks, 11 professionally trained firemen, plus a battalion chief and a training officer. Including a dispatcher, we employ more than 30 people from the state Forestry Department, all of whom are professionally trained for structural firefighting. As a result, the Insurance Service Office has rated this area a 4. The savings on insurance is more than $200 a year.

WITH THE PASSAGE of Proposition 13, we were prohibited from continuing to collect tax to support our service area. In 1978-79, we are forced to utilize our reserves; ask the county for assistance; and share in the funds made available by the state.

It is doubtful that there will be any state money for us during the next year. Therefore, we have started to work on a system of a fixed fee per house for fire protection, commencing in July 1975.

Our problems have been further complicated by the supervisors recommending that LAFCO consider annexing some 40 per cent of CSA 43 to Carmel. The advisory committee of CSA 43 feels that it would be almost impossible to continue giving the same high class protection if we loose 3,500 people and 680 acres. The result could be a return to class 10 insurance or a very high rate per house to maintain our present firefighting capability, in the remaining areas of CSA 43.

WE ARE FACED with a crisis compounded by another crisis. If there ever was a time for action, it is now.

This committee was appointed by the supervisors to advise them of the peoples' wishes in the service area. With no request for advice, supervisors have raised this issue which could result in tearing apart our entire firefighting structure. This committee urges you to protest vigorously. We believe every resident should register a protest with Supervisor Sam Farr.

Both the Local Agency Formation Commission and the city of Carmel will conduct hearings on the annexation. At the LAFCO meeting people both inside and outside the area should show in strength their opposition to annexation and protestation of loss of revenue to the area.

LAFCO will examine, analyze and decide the feasibility of annexation and refer it to the Carmel City Council or dismiss the idea.

The Carmel Council will conduct a protest hearing. If less than 25 per cent of the area residents protest, Carmel must decide in favor of annexation. If 25 to 50 per cent protest, then an election must be scheduled. If 50 per cent or more protest in person or by letter, annexation fails.

WHEN THE CARMEL council was discussing encroaching further into CSA 43 territory, i.e., crossing Highway 1 to grab only the business areas of Carmel Rancho and Carmel Center, the question arose, "What about the Rio Road fire station?" The city administrator replied to the effect that, "No matter who operates it, we'll work together." Sounds simple, but Carmel is considering three more full-time personnel, enough for "one man per shift." CSA 43 has over 30 paid full-time personnel. How can these groups be equated?

Also, CSA 43, with or without the area proposed for annexation, still has Rancho del Mar, High Meadows, South Carmel Hills, Carmel Knolls, Rancho Rio Vista, Carmel Views, Del Mesa, Hacienda Carmel, Riverwood and Arroyo Carmel.

pensive fad item in recent months, according to Mary Hughes, a shop owner from Carmel. Her shop, David, has sold 25 horses in less than a year.

"Many people buy them as art pieces," she said. "Some just collect artifacts."

Publicity in architecture and interior decorating magazines has sparked interest in carousel horses, Mrs. Hughes said.

Conway usually has several horses on display at his store in the Valley Hills Shopping Center, but seven or eight are at his home for good.

"I've always loved horses and carousel figures," he said. "It's hard to part with them."

deadline for filing an appeal.

"There are an unknown number of people in Carmel Valley who, through a computer error, are going to get over-assessed if they don't get down to get their figures checked," Dickinson said.

To appeal an assessment, the homeowner must beat the 5 p.m. deadline Monday.

Appeal forms can be obtained from the assessor's office in Salinas or the local offices or Supervisors Sam Farr and Michal Moore. Farr's office is at 1200 Aquajito Rd. in Monterey. Moore's office also is in Monterey at 380 Alvarado St.

The forms must be filed at the assessor's office Monday at the close of the work day. If they are mailed, the envelope must be postmarked Monday.

Mexican food demonstration

Mexican food lovers can learn to make their own Mexican appetizers and tamales at cooking demonstrations this weekend at the Peppercorn in the Barnyard, Highway 1 and Rio Road, Carmel.

The appetizer demonstration is scheduled Saturday, Sept. 30, from 11 a.m. through the early afternoon. The tamale demonstration will be conducted during the same hours Sunday, Oct. 1.

Everyone is welcome to attend the free programs. For more information, phone 625-0100.

'Red Hot Lovers' at Wharf Theatre

Neil Simon's comedy about the misadventures of a would-be philanderer, The Last of the Red Hot Lovers, plays Friday-Sunday evenings at the Wharf Theatre on Fisherman's Wharf, Monterey.

Curtain is at 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday and 8 p.m. Sunday.

Red Hot Lovers is the story of Barney Cashman, who decides at the age of 47 to join the sexual revolution before it's too late. But after 23 years of marriage and no experience at adultery, he fails in each of the three attempted seductions.

Sam Karas stars in the play and the three women he tries to seduce are played by Sally-Ann Milhous, Gina Welch and Edie Karas. Mrs. Karas is also the director of the production.

Theatergoers may also take advantage of a dinner-theater package offered by the Wharf Theatre.

For reservations or more information, phone 372-7367.

Musical revue at Barnyard

Here's Entertainment!, a musical revue with scenes from eight hit musicals, is on stage Thursday-Sunday evenings at the Theatre in the Barnyard, Highway 1 and Rio Road, Carmel. Curtain is at 8:30 p.m. Thursday-Saturday and 7:30 p.m. Sunday.

A large cast of Monterey Peninsula performers present musical numbers from Grease, The Unsinkable Molly Brown, Chorus Line, Annie, Music Man, Lil Abner, Annie Get Your Gun and Brigadoon. Cast members include Bruce Tuthill, David Durrett, Tina Paradiso, June Barrett and others. Lee Garland is the musical director and Gloria Elber is the director and choreographer.

For reservations or more information, phone 625-1228 after 10 a.m. Wednesday-Saturday.

'Absurd Person Singular' staged at Studio

Alan Ayckbourn's biting comedy of the British class system, Absurd Person Singular, is presented Friday-Sunday evenings at the Studio Theatre/Restaurant, Dolores between Ocean and Seventh, Carmel. Dinner is served at 7 p.m. Friday and Saturday evenings with curtain at 8:30; both are one hour earlier on Sunday.

Absurd Person Singular takes the audience on a visit to three couples in their three kitchens on three successive Christmas Eves. First are the "lower-class" but very up-and-coming Hopcrofts in their bright, new, gadget-filled kitchen where they are anxiously giving a little party for their bank manager and his wife and an architect neighbor and his wife.

The second year, the play moves to the architect and his wife in their neglected and untidy flat, and the third year, the bank manager and his wife are shown in their large, slightly modernized Victorian kitchen.

Running like a dark thread through the wild comedy of behind-the-scenes disasters at Christmas parties is the story of the advance of the Hopcrofts to material prosperity and independence and the decline of the others.

Melodrama at First

A delightful 19th-century melodrama, For the Old Love's Sake, is on stage Friday and Saturday evenings at California's First Theatre, Scott and Pacific Streets, Monterey. Curtain is at 8:30 p.m.

The Troopers of the Gold Coast, resident company at the old theater, present an olio or aftershow of songs and skits after each performance. Audiences are encouraged to hiss the villains and cheer the heroes at all First Theatre shows.

The theater is a registered State Historical Monument as well as an active playhouse. It was built in 1844 as a boarding house and saloon for sailors. Plays have been performed continuously in the theater since 1937.

Elephant seal tours begin Dec. 1 at Ano Nuevo Reserve

The State Parks department will begin accepting reservations Oct. 1 for elephant seal tours at Ano Nuevo State Reserve north of Santa Cruz during the winter season.

Tours will be conducted seven days a week from Dec. 1 to March 31. The dunes area of the reserve, in southern San Mateo County, will be closed during that period except for official guided tours.

The seals have attracted increasingly large numbers of visitors during the last several winters and tour reservations are expected to be filled early.

The park has been closed during the winter months except for guided tours for the past four years to allow a more natural development of the seal herd. More than 500 elephant seals appeared on the mainland at Ano Nuevo State Reserve last winter: 108 adult females, 86 pups and the rest males of various ages. The seal population on the mainland at any one time reached a maximum of 363, compared with 183 the previous year and 73 in 1976.

Tours will be conducted by state park rangers and students from the University of California cooperative internship program. The total time for the tour is about two and one-half hours and the total walking distance is about three miles.

For reservations, phone 1-415-879-0227 or 1-415-879-0228 between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. seven days a week.

Big band concert Thurs. at Fort Ord

Big Band Era Nostalgia Night is the theme of a concert and dance Thursday, Sept. 28, at Pomeroy Recreation Center, Sixth Avenue and B Street, Fort Ord.

The Del Monte Express, a 17-piece stage band directed by Mel Hawkins, will play for listening and dancing from 8 to 10 p.m.

Free corsages will be given away, and free tickets are available in advance at Pomeroy Recreation Center, the Presidio of Monterey information office, Naval Postgraduate School Recreation Office and the Armed Services YMCA, El Estero and Webster, Monterey. A limited number of tickets will be available at the door.

Runners may enter Skyclimb race

Running enthusiasts may participate in the Salinas Skyclimb, a seven and one-half mile foot race, Saturday, Sept. 30, in Toro Regional Park on Highway 68 east of Monterey.

Registration begins at 9:30 a.m. and the race, over a dirt course with 1,500-foot elevation gain, begins at 10:30 a.m. All entrants must be AAU members.

Medals will be awarded to winners in each of six age categories for men and women. T-shirts will be presented to all finishers.

The entry fee is $3. For more information, phone 1-424-2221.

'Robles Revolt'

Valley homeowners call meeting

Robles del Rio homeowners, concerned about a spate of subdivision proposals in the area, have called a general meeting of residents next Wednesday at 8 p.m. at Hidden Valley Music Seminars.

The group, calling itself the "Robles Revolt," will try to muster support to block new lot splits. The area was first developed in the 1930s and now has more than 400 homes and 900 residents. There is only one road into the area.

County standards now require at least two access roads for subdivisions of 200 or more.

Residents also are concerned about fire protection in the wooded area because roads in the area are narrow, steep and winding.

The seven-lot Vista Robles major subdivision at the far end of Robles del Rio won rezoning approval from the Monterey County Planning Commission on Aug. 30. It still must go to the board of supervisors for action.

Several more minor subdivisions also are proposed and in various stages of the planning process.

Sierra club plans two weekend hikes

Members of the Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club plan hikes in the Partington Canyon area and in Toro Park this weekend. Other interested persons are welcome to join the outings.

An eight-mile round trip hike in Partington Canyon Saturday, Sept. 30, will involve a 2,000-foot ascent up the canyon by trail and a return by jeep road. Hikers will meet at 8 a.m. behind Brinton's in the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center, Highway 1 and Carmel Valley Road, Carmel, for the 37-mile drive to the trail head. Bring lunch, water, boots and the suggested carpool fee of $2. For more information, phone leader Rudd Crawford, 372-6626.

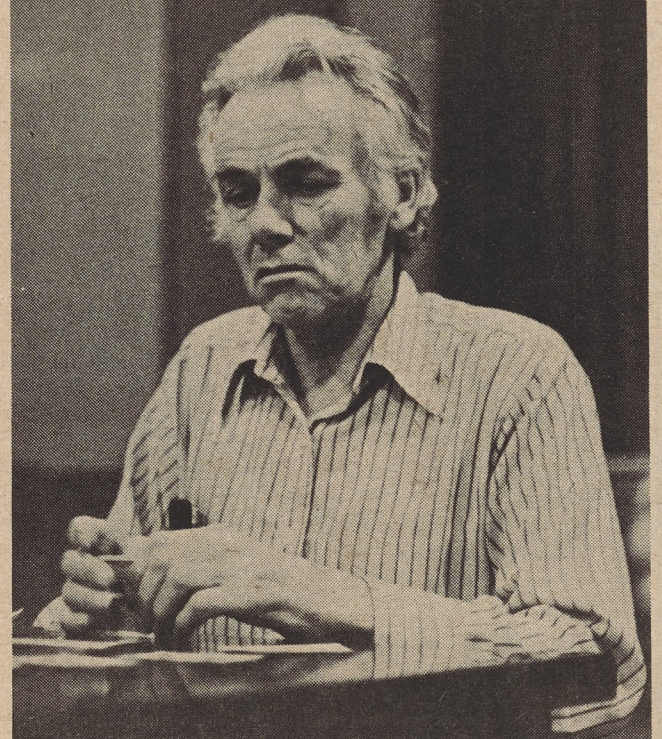
The hike to Ollasson Peak and back in Toro Park is scheduled Sunday, Oct. 1. The outing is seven and one-half miles long and involves an elevation gain of 1,000 feet. Meet at Cinema 70 in the Del Monte Shopping Center, Monterey, at 8 a.m. or at the Toro Park entrance gate at 8:30 a.m. Bring lunch, water, boots and the carpool fee of 50 cents. For more information, phone Martha Crow, 372-1858 evenings, or Phyllis Grodzitsky, 375-6436.

Bacchus rules at Wine Stomp

Bacchus, the god of wine, will rule over the Monterey Peninsula Winery's Fifth Annual Vintage Festival and Wine Stomp Sunday, Oct. 1, in the outdoor courtyard of the winery east of Monterey on Highway 68. Hours are 2-6 p.m.

A special bin of Zinfandel grapes will be available for those who really want to get into the spirit of the occasion and stomp grapes. Other activities will include grape crushing by hand in the winery's antique crushing machines, belly dancing and a buffet of meats, cheese, fresh fruits, vegetables and red and white wines.

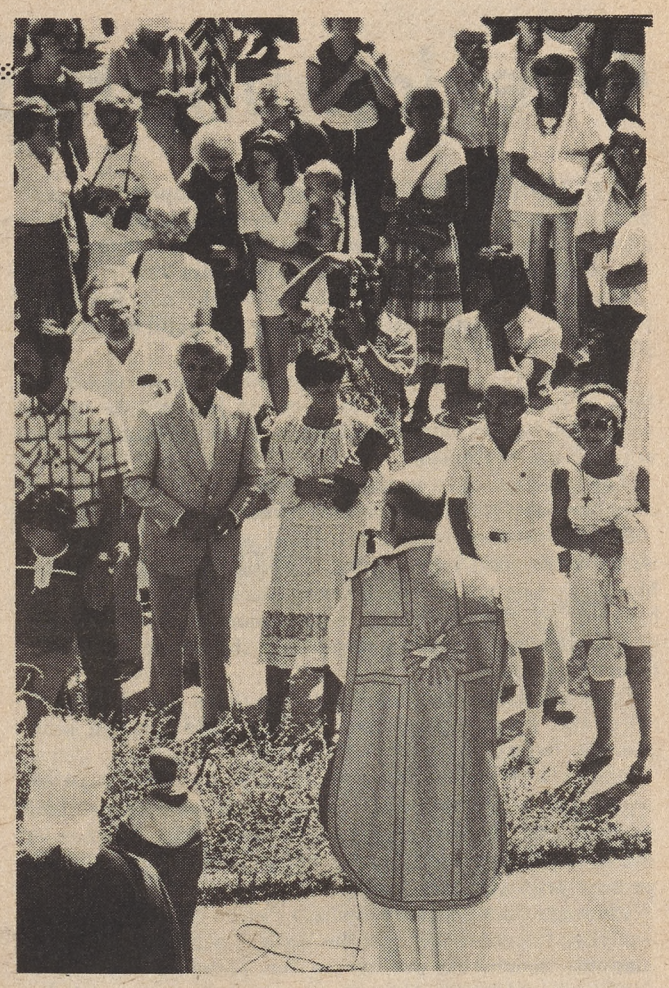
Country and bluegrass music will be provided for dancing.



BOB LOTZ will play Willie Loman in Arthur Miller's "Death of a Salesman," to be presented Friday-Sunday, Oct. 6-8, at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel. The production will be directed by John H. Pascale of Carmel.

Mission Fiesta: 'Muy picante'

THE TEMPERATURE was as hot as the Mexican food, which was muy picante, Sunday at the traditional Fiesta de San Carlos Borromeo hosted at the Carmel Mission Basilica. Monsignor Eamon MacMahon (right photo) opened the fiesta with a special blessing and then the merriment began. Mariachi music by the Manuel Campos group (below) got the fiestagoers on their feet. Then it was time for lunch. Lillian Ebsen of Carmel (lower right photo) tended the tacos as the crowd filed by loading its lunch plates. Each fall, the mission observes the traditional fiesta that started in 1770, when the mission was founded. (Michael Stang photos)



Big Sur Jeffers tour October 3

Reservations are now being accepted for a bus tour Oct. 3 through Jeffers Country in Big Sur sponsored by the Robinson Jeffers Tor House Foundation.

Photographer Ansel Adams will lead the tour, which is planned as a benefit for the foundation's efforts to preserve the great stone Tor House built by Jeffers. Tour narration and comments will be provided by Elayne Fitzpatrick Grimm, Marcia Hovick, Gordon Newell, David Hughes and possibly poet William Everson and Dame Judith Anderson.

The six-hour tour will begin at 10 a.m. and include lunch at one of the locations described in a Jeffers poem. Each participant will also receive a copy of the Scrimshaw Press paperback book Jeffers Country and a detailed map showing the locations described in many of the Jeffers poems.

Honest People

Dear Editor:

This is just a note of thanks to the Carmel police, the sheriff's office and the kind and honest couple who returned my purse with everything in it.

I inadvertantly left my purse on my car while helping our large dog into it. We drove off with the purse still sitting there and went to Monterey. Apparently the purse fell off near the Serra statue.

This couple picked it up and called the Carmel police, who, in turn, called the sheriff's department (we live in Carmel Valley).

The Carmel police picked up the purse at the couple's home and gave it to the sheriff's officer who comes up the Valley. About two-and-a-half hours later when we returned home, a car came down the driveway and there was the officer from the sheriff's department, purse in hand with everything intact.

Thanks so very much to all of you. It's nice to know there are still some honest people in the world who care about others.

About research

Dear Editor:

While I feel a fine job was done in the research of the goals which the handicapped can achieve as reported in the article on Rippling River on Sept. 14, the research omitted a fairly large chunk of the handicapped population. I am speaking of those for whom educational or vocational goals have no real meaning.

While Rippling River is not adequately funded so that it has the best of everything to offer, success and personal growth cannot be measured solely on educational or vocational achievement. Certainly these are laudatory in themselves and should never be played down in their importance, many handicap organizations fail to consider those who have neither the drive, personality, intelligence, or whatever else it may take to achieve such heights of glory. They seem to forget that the handicapped do not fall into neat little pigeonholes where they can all be classified as equal.

My only problem, if you can call it a problem, is that I have lived at this facility ever since it opened in July 1975, and I have watched those who have been able to take advantage of what Rippling River has to offer, and I have had the greatest reward in seeing them flower and bloom tremendously. All it takes is a little love.

Valley resort builders appeal

Overlapping master plans muddy Marriott issue

THE MONTEREY COUNTY Board of Supervisors will be asked to sort out "mishmash of master plans" Tuesday afternoon and decide if the Rancho Canada Marriott Lodge is a reasonable project for the Lower Carmel Valley.

The county planning commission thinks not and cited four different master plans in denying the hotel application June 28.

Attorney Gerald Dalton, representing the development firm of Rancho Canada de la Segunda Inc., thinks otherwise. And he has found language in the same four plans to support his contention.

The question goes to the supervisors at 2 p.m. in their chambers at Church and Alisal streets in Salinas.

If the board rules that the hotel project is consistent with master plans for the area, it would still go back to the Monterey County Planning Commission for a use permit hearing. At that time, the commission would deal with questions about sewage disposal and the impact of traffic from the project.

The commission delayed discussing those issues when it ruled the hotel inconsistent in May. That is the only question before the supervisors now.

Dalton will argue the case for the developers, with opponents of the Marriott project still organizing their presentation before the supervisors. The Alliance—a coalition of Carmel and Carmel Valley groups—coordinated protest activities last spring.

Planning Commissioner William Peters of Carmel Valley analyzed the consistency of the project with four different planning documents during the last planning meeting.

His interpretation of the plans, accepted unanimously by the commission, is that the golf course property is intended for open space or rural residential housing and not the 376-room resort hotel envisioned by the Marriott developers.

Peters cited sections in the Carmel Valley Master Plan of 1961; the Lower Carmel Valley amendment to the master plan adopted in 1976; the Monterey Peninsula Area General Plan of 1966; and the Conservation-Open Space element of the county general plan adopted in 1974.

DALTON BELIEVES the plans are much more general and flexible than Peters reads them and would allow a hotel on the westerly nine holes of the 36-acre golf course.

In an eight-page letter to the board of supervisors, he refutes the planning commission arguments point by point and asserts that a hotel is both logical and permissible on part of the 271-acre golf course property.

The commission ruled that the hotel proposal is inconsistent with the Carmel Valley Master Plan, which designates the 25-acre site as a low-density residential area. The commission noted that hotels could be considered on large parcels if "such uses and their locations will not be detrimental to the surrounding properties and the community as a whole." The commission made no such finding.

Dalton, in his letter, said that hotels are permitted under the residential zoning, and emphasizes the master plan section stating that "transitional uses such as resort hotels should be considered as buffer areas around commercial centers in the Valley."

Citing the Lower Carmel Valley amendment to the master plan, the commission ruled the hotel was inconsistent because the golf course land is outside the planned commercial area. Had the Marriott site been intended for a hotel, the commissioners reasoned, it would have been included within the boundaries of the business district.

Dalton calls this "irrelevant."

"The amendment does not purport to specify uses beyond its boundaries," he said in the appeal. And, he reiterated, a hotel is permitted even in a rural residential district, because of the zoning and especially on a large parcel of land.

THE COMMISSION said the golf course is apparently in greenbelt under the Monterey Peninsula Area General Plan. It found that there "is no discussion of plans that would extend the (hotel) use to the area in the greenbelt. (It) does not allow the elimination of the greenbelt for the proposed uses."

Dalton counters that the westerly portion of the golf course "greenbelt" is shown as "suburban two to four families per net acre and the eastern portion of the greenbelt contains Hacienda Carmel."

He says the map of the greenbelt shows it beginning east of Carmel Middle School, which would allow development of the Marriott site. And the plan does not exclude hotels from the residential area.

Dalton says the Carmel Valley Master Plan encourages resort hotels as a buffer around commercial areas.

"This is the intention of the proposed project," he said.

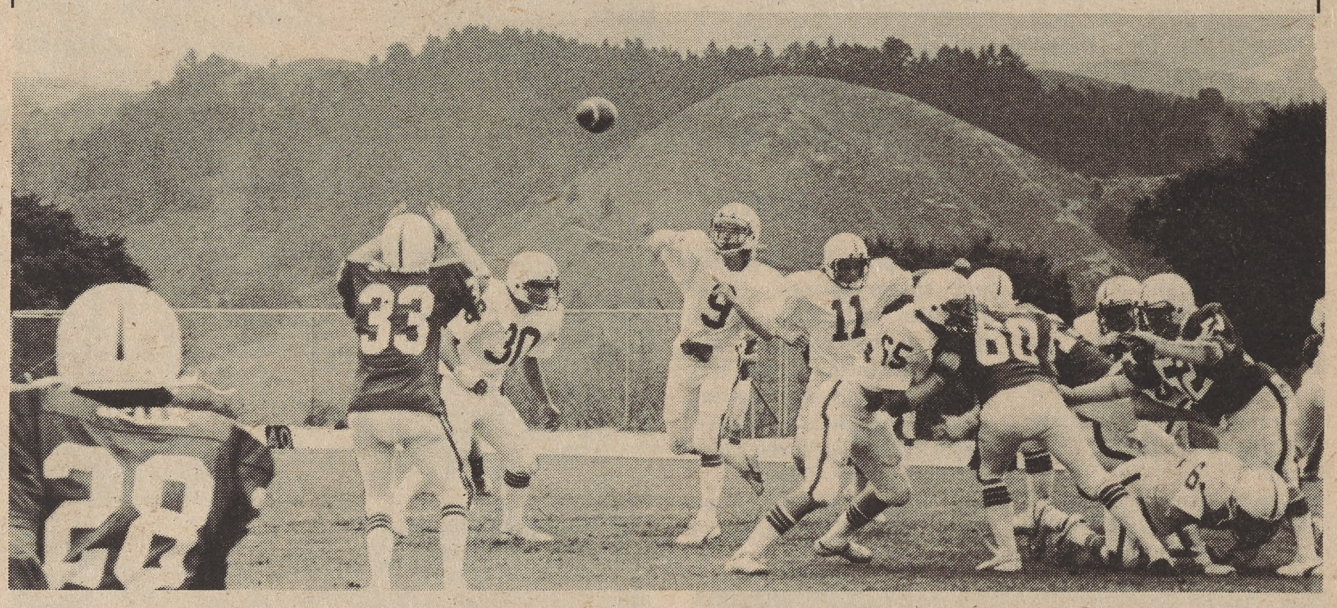
Greenbelts may be developed, Dalton says, again citing the Monterey Peninsula Area Plan, especially if there is a trade-off between clustered development and preservation of open space. He says building a 376-room hotel would help preserve the remaining open space of the golf course, which might otherwise be built out with houses.

"The designation 'greenbelt' is nowhere in the plan equated with no development," Dalton said. And the plan specifies that greenbelt boundaries be vague and the degree of development allowed without destroying the purpose of a greenbelt " 'must vary with the specific site and the interest of the specific owner.' "

The commission also found the hotel plan inconsistent with the open space and conservation element of the Monterey County General Plan. It called the project "premature development" and "unnecessary conversion of open space land to urban sprawl ahead of its actual need."

Dalton said the planning section is intended as a guide, not "to preclude reasonable and controlled urban expansion and the rights of individuals to develop and use their land."

Padres overwhelm Morro Bay



AFTER TOPPLING Morro Bay last week, the Carmel High Padres (1-1) travel to Felton on Saturday to take on San Lorenzo Valley High School at 2 p.m.

Padre coach Frank Lynch said in an interview that he expects a tough game from San Lorenzo, which also has a 1-1 record. San Lorenzo defeated Half Moon Bay, 28-0, two weeks ago, but was defeated by Ceres High School, 21-0, last week.

"From what I understand about San Lorenzo, they have two all-league players on their team," Lynch said. "I also hear they have a fairly good size team."

Against Morro Bay, the Padres were in complete command as they overwhelmed a much smaller Pirate team. Carmel scored the first time they had the ball on a 26-yard pass from John Lucido to Dave Araujo. The score was set up by a roughing-the-kicker penalty against Morro Bay.

The next time Carmel had the ball, the Padres drove 93 yards with the score coming on a magnificent 34-yard run by Lucido. The Padres scored again four minutes later on a 46-yard screen pass to Paul St. Germain. Carmel scored for the last time on a 37-yard run by Lucido, his third touchdown of the year.

Lynch said he was pleased with the entire team effort, but in particular, he was happy with the play by Lucido and Araujo on offense, and Eric Smith, Arlon Moore, Jim Colletto, John Heebner and Joe Victorine on defense.

In frosh-soph action, the Padres evened their record at 1-1 by defeating Morro Bay, 22-8.

THE CARMEL High School girls' tennis team opened its season last week by winning one out of three matches. The Padres opened the season Sept. 18 by defeating Monterey High, 4-3, at Monterey. Carmel then lost to Aptos 4-3 last Thursday and on Friday the Padres were edged by Santa Cruz, 4-3, in Santa Cruz. Carmel will play at Robert Louis Stevenson School today at 3:30 p.m.

In junior varsity action, Carmel defeated Aptos, 3-1, and the Padres tied Santa Cruz, 1-1, on Friday in Santa Cruz.

IN WATER POLO play, the Carmel High School alumni edged the current varsity team, 5-4, on Wednesday of last week in the Carmel pool. It was the sixth straight year that the alumni have beaten the varsity.

The varsity goals were scored by Art Strum, who had two goals, Adam Sherburne and Jeff Hogans. Varsity goalie Peter Dew had 10 saves.

THE CARMEL girls' swim team won six relays and set five league records in the Mission Trail Athletic League relays Saturday at the Carmel pool. The Padres swim team has won 54 straight dual meets without a loss.

Pilot program

Resource officer for high school

THE CARMEL SCHOOL board reluctantly agreed Tuesday to have a school resource officer from the Monterey County Sheriff's Department come to the high school campus this year.

The board members agreed on a 3-1 vote to participate in the pilot program. But only after they were assured the district would be allowed to help pick the officer and determine how he will be used at the school.

Trustees Richard Wilsdon, Elizabeth Bell and Clayton Neill supported the move. Trustee Frances Gaver was opposed. Pamela Smith was absent.

The officer will be hired under a $14,000 federal law enforcement grant given to the sheriff's department as part of a three-year program, according to Det. Sgt. Norman Hicks.

Next year, the department will add a second officer at North County High School and in the third year another deputy will be assigned to the Carmel grades kindergarten through eighth if the district wishes.

Doug Pease, a financial planner from Carmel Valley, questioned if the district would hire the officer on its own if the sheriff's department didn't have grant money.

Superintendent Carl Wilsey said it would depend on other district priorities, but he pointed out that the position is being paid for with federal dollars, not district funds.

Board opposition arose because of confusion about exactly what the officer will do.

Hicks said he will definitely not be a "cop on campus." Beyond that, details of his duties will have to be worked out with Principal Dan Stevenson and high school faculty members.

Hicks said the man will be at least a three-year veteran and will wear street clothes. He probably will do some teaching about citizen responsibilities under the law. Hicks said he also envisions the man doing crisis counseling and meeting informally with students to talk about law enforcement.

Mrs. Gaver questioned the need for an additional crisis counselor when the district already has a community counselor and access to the Monterey Peninsula Youth Project.

Stevenson said he views the deputy as "another resource officer" he will be "glad to have" on campus.

Pease asked the board if they could justify spending the $14,000 expense in light of pressing educational needs.

Wilsdon said the money is not from district funds and would go to another school if Carmel refused the officer.

Wilsey said the sheriff's office "feels in the long run it will save taxpayers' money" by "having young people who understand and respect the law." They would commit fewer crimes and produce fewer law enforcement expenses, he said.

Wilsdon agreed to support the program because he has "faith" in Wilsey and Stevenson, who endorsed it. The two also appended five conditions to the approval, accepted by the board, making Stevenson supervisor of the officer on campus and giving the district veto power over the officer if he doesn't work out.

While routine disciplinary actions and violations would be handled by the school staff, Hicks said the officer would intervene as a policeman if he saw a major crime taking place on campus.

"A doctor can go on vacation, but if he sees someone in dire need, he helps them," Hicks said.

Mrs. Bell, who reluctantly seconded the motion to participate, asked the board to get a progress report by March.

The officer is expected to be on the job by December.

High school board sends resolution to Caltrans

The Carmel school board sent a resolution to Caltrans on Tuesday asking that the state highway agency try to find a solution to the traffic safety problem around Carmel High School.

The board expressed concern this summer that schoolchildren are in danger when they cross Highway 1 to go to campus.

"Unfortunately, problems like this don't get looked at until something bad happens," said Trustee Clayton Neill Jr. "All you need is a little bump (between two cars) and a car could hit a group of kids."

The board asked Caltrans to study the situation and give the district and area residents some alternatives for making the highway safer for students.

GUEST minister for the lecture series is the Rev. Ray Kronberger of Auburn. The series starts Sunday.

Lutheran lectures scheduled

The public is invited to attend a four-day spiritual life mission that begins Sunday at St. Philip's Lutheran Church of Carmel in Carmel Valley. The church is at the corner of Schulte and Carmel Valley roads.

"Go and Tell How Great God Is" is the title of the lecture series to be delivered by the Rev. Ray Kronberger, a guest minister. The lectures will emphasize congregational renewal, Christian growth and person-to-person concern.

The first lecture is scheduled Sunday at the regular 9 a.m. service. On the following three days, the lectures will be given at 7:30 p.m. Also, discussion and learning sessions are planned from 10 a.m. to noon on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Kronberger is from Auburn. He has been in the ministry for 35 years serving congregations in California, Arizona and Iowa.

Obituaries

JOAN A. MCINTYRE

Joan A. McIntyre, 63, died last Thursday at her home in Carmel Valley following a lengthy illness.

Born in London, Mrs. McIntyre moved with her husband, Donald R. McIntyre, to Carmel Valley in 1967.

In addition to her husband, she is survived by her daughter, Jeannie Islander of Prunedale; a sister, Mrs. Elsie Jackson of Clear Lake Park; and two grandchildren.

Opening on social services panel

County Supervisor Sam Farr of Carmel is seeking applicants from qualified individuals in his district for the Monterey County Social Services Commission.

The commission advises the board of supervisors on the administration of the Social Services Department on programs of federal, state and county welfare. The commission also advises on the needs of the citizens and the Social Services Department that are not met under current laws. In areas such as child protection and food stamps, the commission fulfills state laws requiring advisory groups.

Meetings are on the third Wednesday of the month from 4:30 to 6 p.m. at the Monterey County Office of Education in Salinas.

Each commission member is appointed for a four-year term as a volunteer advisor. Individuals can apply at Farr's office, 1200 Aguajito Rd., Monterey.

Bicycle benefit Sunday

Scores of bicyclists are expected to ride an 11-mile circuit through Carmel on Sunday as part of the third annual Northern California Bike Ride Against Diabetes.

Riders will start at 9 a.m. at Rio Road and Junipero Avenue. The course follows 15th Avenue, turns at Carmelo Street where it connects with Scenic Road. The event is scheduled to conclude at 5 p.m.
